FACTS AND STATS:

Lauren King obtained her B.A. from Samford University and her Doctorate from Fuller School of Psychology. Her research focuses on Eating Disorders, body image, and meaning in life. Lauren completed her pre-doctoral internship and post-doctoral fellowship at Southeast Psych prior to coming on as a full-time psychologist. She worked as a therapist in an outpatient clinic, a community counseling center, and a partial hospitalization/intensive outpatient center for Eating Disorders. Additionally, Lauren has provided in-home therapy for children on the Autism spectrum and children with other special needs.

Lauren provides therapy and assessment for children, teens, and adults. Specific areas of interest include eating issues, depression, anxiety, spiritual issues, trauma, learning problems, and autism spectrum disorders. Lauren loves working with people by building a relationship with them and helping them capitalize on their strengths. She is interested in integrating people's faith into their therapy. Lauren provides psychoeducational and other diagnostic assessments to assist with educational and therapeutic planning.
